Dear Dr. Bradshaw,

We have carefully revised all of our materials to comply with the editorial policies and formatting requirements. The error bars on Figures 2 and 3 are clearly visible to us on multiple monitors, but if this is an issue in the proofs we can make them even darker. Below we provide the additional information requested in the policy checklist:

Summary of main findings:
"Gender stereotypes, such as the idea that men are more suited for paid work while women for taking care of the home and family, are reflected in the large-scale distributional structure of natural language."

Twitter handles: @mollyllewis and @glupyan

Please do not hesitate to contact us if there are any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,
Molly Lewis and Gary Lupyan